HEROES OF THE PLAGUE.

Those Who Have Given Up Their Lives in Yellow Fever Time.

Times When the Best and Wors Phases of Human Nature Were Brought Out-Noble Sacrifices.

Yellow fever has developed the vorld's greatest heroes and heroines. Out of the horror, misery and terror of an epidemic of the dread disease here have come characters whose subime acts of courage and heroism will ever be remembered. The fever which is now causing a paric in the south recalls to mind that greatest epidemic in our history in 1878.

The most touching example of heroic devotion to duty and absolute indifference to fear in helping the people he loved is furnished in the acts of young Herbert Landrum, a brother of Dr. W. W. Landrum, pastor of the First Baptist church, in this city. Herbert Landrum was one of the martyrs of journalism, whi went to their death during that famous plague at Memphis, because they were too brave to leave their posts.

Young Landrum cheerfully gave his ife in trying to save young Jeff Davis, the son of the president of the confederey. At that time Landrum was city editor of the Memphis Avalanche. When the epidemic broke out at Memphis he was at Nashville reporting a democratic convention. He left at once for home, and during the rest of life never left the city of death and desolation. Though but 20 years of age, he was among the brightest newspaper men of the country. He had displayed rare ability and alent in his work and had won a fine reputation as a writer. Memphis at that time had a population of 45,000. This was reduced by flight to 15,000, and struct quarantines stopped the exodus or the city would have been deserted. Of the 15,000 left in the city, 5,000 had the yellow fever. Of the patients, 1,500 died. For weeks the city was shut off from the world. Sickness and death were in every house. The police force was disorganized. Riot and outlawry prevailed, and added to the already verwhelming terror of the situation Such conditions necessarily developed the best and the worst in the human character. In this region of terror hundreds who had never displayed any very striking qualities developed na-tures full of enduring strength and ourage.

Among the bravest and most active vas Herbert Landrum. He would labor all day at his newspaper duties and would sit by the side of some suffering patient all night, ministering to wants that were soon to end with death.

Every day hundreds would die. Thompson, the noble editor-in-chief of the Avalanche, fell a victim to the dread Elegant rooms, single or en suite, at destroyer. Other members of the staff derd or left the city. In a few weeks after the beginning of the epidemic the young city editor was the only member of the staff left. The printers had died Oures stomach troubles, also biliousness or refugeed, and only one compositor was left. He and Landrum swore to > them away. They kept their oath, It was on a bright September day that Jefferson Davis, Jr., was touched by the breath of the disease. Nurses were scarce and the young man's friends had io nurse him. True to his friends even in times of greatest danger, Herbert Landrum went to the bedside of the son of the great man whom all the south still loves and honors though he is dead. For days Landrum was by the side of his friend. Then death came and relieved the devoted watcher. All this time he continued to publish a small daily paper, in which there was no news except of fever.

> The fever, of course, claimed Landrum. He knew that he would have it when he went to watch by Davis, but he was not afraid. He had in his nature the same brave loyal qualities that made his father famous during that ong epidemic. He was sick but one day before he began to recover. In a few days he was able to go to work. He went back to his duties and, with the aid of the printer, published the Avalanche. He worked but one day. Then he relapsed. In a few hours he was dead. He had kept his word. He died at his post, the last of the staff. The next day the compositor died and the Avalanche was printed no more. Landrum could have left the city as the others did, but he chose to stand by his post of duty.

George Landrum was another brother who gave up his life for his untiring devotion to his friend. At the beginning of the outbreak he left Memphis to carry to Augusta the children of Dr. Boggs who is now chancellor of the state university, but who was then pastor of a Presbyterian church in Memphis. When he had landed the children safe in Augusta George Landrum went back to Memphis to help care for the suffering. When he arrived at night he found a man and two women holding a drunken carousal in his 'ather's house. He asked them what they were doing and they said they were the nurses. The man told him that every one in the house was dead but his father and mother. He fordered the drunken trio from the house and went to nurse his parents, who afterward recovered.

The son was soon taken ill and a few days after his brother Herbert's death

The nurses who saved the lives of hundreds of the sufferers in that time were fallen women. When every one else turned pale with fear and were unable to help themselves or others, these women quit their lives of shame and beame ministering angels. Hundreds of them went from every city in the United States to lose or redeem their lives in the great epidemic. They were the only reliable nurses and they proved to be heroines indeed. Many of them died. None of them ever returned to their lives of shame.—Atlanta Consti-

A woman's best jewels are her babes. A healthy, happy child is wo-manhood's most appropriate orna-ment. A childless woman is to be pit-ied, even though she be the possessor of other jewels that are priceless. A womanly woman knows this and would sacrifice all the diamonds of all the nations for the clinging, confiding touch of baby hands. Thousands of women lead childless, loveless lives because of ill-health. They do not understand the duties that they owe to themselves. They neglect the most delicate and important parts of woman's organism. They suffer untold agonics from weakness and disease of the organs that make motherlicod possible, and never know the thrilling touch of baby fingers. They imagine their cases hopeless. she be the posses-

Mrs. Rebecca Gardner, of Grafton, York-Co.
Va., writes: "I was so sick with dyspepsia that I could not eat anything for over four months. I had to starve myself, as nothing would stay on my stomach. I tried almost everything that people would tell me about, and nothing did me any good. I weighted only 80 pounds. I took two bottles of the Golden Medical Discovery and thank God, and your medicine, I am as well as I ever was, and now weigh 125 pounds. I have a bottle of your 'Favorite Prescription', now, and that is a wonderful medicine for female weakness. Praise God that he created such a man as you."

A NEW KANSAS INDUSTRY Frog Raising Is Becoming a Lucia

Speaking of new industries, word comes from Butler county that the frog leg industry is assuming considerable proportions, says the Topeka Mail. Many people have supposed that the frog would naturally seek miasmatic districts where ague lurked above the skum of swamps. This, we are informed, is a mistake. The Kansas frog is said to delight in the clear ozone filled atmosphere of the prairie and sings. song of unusual clearness owing to the effect of the clear, bracing are on his larynx. His ham is whiter and firmer Kidney Pills in kidney troubles. After in texture than the ham of the frog being treated two year for aloumen in reared among the missmatifiedted the urine and deriving no material ben-swamps. Gradually Kansasis-becomefit, during which time life insurance ing the abode of luxury, such as is unwas refused me I purchased in May, known by the unfortunate inhabitants 1896, six boxes of your Sparagus Kidney of other states. In the line of fish, truit and fowl Kansas has long since hit the high notch with epicures, but While taking them, I ate and drank we have sighed in vain for home grown anything my apdetite craved for. To frog legs and oysters. The frog leg day I am a well man and carry $5,000 problem has been solved. The only life insurance in leading insurance thing remaining to be done is to fix up companies, which was refused me be oyster bays and bring the oyster back fore taking your pills. What can I to the home of his ancestor. Plant him say more us a convincing argument in an artificial pond in western Kausas, that Hobbs Sparagus Kikney Pills where in a remote, prehistoric age, his away. Of course there will be some sad features about it for the oyster, for he will see lying about him, unless they have all been picked up within the last year or two, the petrifled coverings of his departed sires. As he looks on their stony shells the new oyster will naturally experience a feeling of sadness as he thinks of the rocky times experienced by his ancestors, but that was because they did not understand irrigation and depended on the natural rainfall of the country. Frog legs and native oysters are among the things that can be banked on in the future Kansas PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.
